

MR. GREELY'S LATE SPEECHES.—After a two weeks' tour in the West, Mr. Greeley has returned to New York, having appeared in various parts of the country before vast popular assemblages of men whose votes he seeks in behalf of a cause which he believes involves the pacification of the country and purification of the Government. As he himself has said, it has long been a part of the unwritten law of our politics that a Presidential candidate shall not go before the people and discuss his own claims. This historical precedent he has seen fit to disregard, in view of his great cause. Still, it is not every aspirant to the Presidency who might not damage his prospects by addressing popular audiences, and, therefore, it might be expedient for some to enrobe themselves in dignity, and have it understood that silence is also statesmanship. But Mr. Greeley seems to have seen no reason why he should not look his countrymen in the face, nor why he should confine himself in his addresses to them to non-political topics. He has now returned to New York, after an absence of some two weeks, during which he has made some five or six speeches, of various lengths, almost every day. His audiences have been vast and of all shades of national and local politics and ideas, yet, if he has ever failed of speaking appropriately to the audience and the occasion—if he has ever failed of eliciting those sympathies which make the whole world kin—if he has ever been indiscreet in one of his utterances, or irritating or uncharitable in a single word or expression—we do not know when or where those faults can be justly laid to his charge. There may be some who cannot understand what an achievement this is, but it is because they cannot realize its difficulties, and now do not know even the magnetism of an immense audience, in enthusiastic accord with a speaker, to tempt the most practiced orator to forget his discretion and spread his sails to the favoring breeze, without an eye to the helm.

Mr. Greeley has come out from the new and trying ordeal to which he has been subjected, not only without damage to his reputation, but with new laurels, showing a fertility and versatility of powers which are really amazing, and not injuring the effect by a single one of the numerous indiscretions which his enemies predicted. Far superior, however, to the intellectual triumph, is his identifying himself with the great sentiment of reconciliation which pervades the hearts and minds of the country, and of which he is the representative, the champion, as he is also of honesty and faithful service in public officers. Whatever the result of the canvass, it is to be hoped that the good seed which Mr. Greeley has sown broadcast will in due time take root, and the real instead of the nominal re-union, decentralization of power, and the right of the American people to manage their own affairs will eventually be triumphant.

A WHITE ELEPHANT IN AMERICA.—As Sir Boyle Roach, if living, would say, that rara avis, a white elephant, has arrived in this country. These elephants are more probably Albinoes, and are very seldom seen, even in the East. In Siam, where a white elephant is an object of worship, it can with difficulty be procured. Upon the death of the last one, at Bangkok, after a long search, a beautiful cream colored Albino was found for his successor. He was captured. On a certain day he was brought from the forest to be installed in his palace with the customary white monkey, to ward off evil spirits. There he was to be worshipped as possessing the form associated with the appearance on earth of Buddha. The people went out to meet him with shouts and rejoicing, and such a waving of national banners, emblazoned with a white elephant on a crimson ground, that was enough to frighten Buddha himself. No sooner was the honored beast within sight of the town of Bangkok, and the motley and noisy array of people, than he incontinently turned around, broke easily from his keepers, and made for his native jungle. Whether the distressed Siamese ever caught him again we never heard. The white elephant, now at Chattanooga, Tennessee, is, we believe, the only one that has ever arrived in this country.

ANNAPOLIS.—John O'Keefe, the New York aspirant for honors at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, has been most cordially received by his classmates, every one welcoming him with hearty grasps of the hand. It was represented to them how he had struggled to merit appointment, and it was hoped his lowly position would not influence his associates against his honest effort to acquire himself of every duty. On account of his humble birth, he is likely, says one of his classmates, to be their recognized leader. Colored Cadet Midshipman Conyers will not fare so well. Secretary Robeson, however, has given cadets timely warning that if there is any attempt to haze him or disregard the discipline of the academy, offenders will be looked upon as unwilling to observe the first rule of service, viz: obedience to commands of superiors, and regarded as unworthy to remain at the academy.

A correspondent of a Pittsburg paper describing the recent auction sale at the Patent Office at Washington, says that among the furniture there were such tempting little sofas and chairs for a child's play house, and such a darling little bedstead for a flaxen-haired doll; such cunning tables for a children's tea-party; such ravishing little cooking stoves with the tiniest of tea kettles, that could be made to steam and sputter like a great family kettle with bulged sides and a crooked spout. And only to think that there was no good old grand-father there to buy all these treasures for the children, and they were knocked down to a grum model-maker, who takes no pleasure in making little folks happy.

THE DAILY PHOENIX.

"Let our just Censures Attend the True Event."

BY J. A. SELBY. COLUMBIA, S. C., SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 6, 1872. VOL. VIII—NO. 174.

The New York Times, Grant's leading organ, takes the part of the steamship companies against the immigrants so horribly maltreated on their voyage to this country, and flippantly ridicules their sufferings. The Grant and Wilson leaders have very little use for "the d-d Dutch and Irish."

The Detroit Post speaks of Grant's "dignified, gentlemanly reticence." It is not often that a lack of brains gives anything that is either dignified or gentlemanly to a man. But, then, Grant has a great many things given him that no other President ever had.

The Appletons have just published a guide book entitled "Skeleton Routes." Do they wish us to understand that the author traveled as a dead-head? or does he simply describe the "out-skirts" of the places visited?
